Rice lovers will find themselves in heaven with the perennial favourite, Nasi Kandar, usually available 24 hours a day. Indian in origin, Nasi Kandar has assimilated local flavours into the dish and people from all walks of life enjoy the delicious taste of this local specialty. The best way to eat Nasi Kandar is to mix the curried gravy together with rice, topping it off with a juicy piece of fried chicken and a wide selection of accompanying side dishes.

For those looking for something different, Claypot Crab Rice is a delicious alternative and can be found in most seafood restaurants. The sweet goodness of the crab is infused with the rice during the cooking process producing a scrumptious claypot rice dish.

Not to be outdone is yet another favourite, Banana Leaf Rice. Originating in India this dish can be found served at most Indian restaurants during lunch time. Rice is served on a banana leaf, which enhances the aroma and flavours of the rice and the variety of side dishes served with it, usually consisting of vegetables, pickles and Indian crackers called Papadam.

For a satisfying lunch or dinner, a must-try when you visit Seberang Perai is the grilled seafood, which is also known as Ikan Bakar in Malay. It is cooked on the spot and served with a special sauce that gives the grilled seafood a delicious kick. Grilled local mackerel is prepared with a spicy shrimp paste or sambal that is massaged into the fish to give it a flavourful finish. Other favourites not to be missed include the ever-famous satay, which can be found in most hawker centre's in Seberang Perai.

Some must-try noodle eats include the ever-famous Mee Udang, Char Koay Teow and Mee Rebus. Mee Udang or prawn noodles are yellow noodles in a mouth-watering gravy with some very plump prawns. Char Koay Teow on the other hand is a delectable stir-fried dish served with eggs, prawns, cockles and chives while Mee Rebus is an Indian-Muslim noodle dish served in thick gravy accompanied by an assortment of fried tofu, boiled potatoes, hardboiled eggs, prawn fritters and garnished with sliced fresh lime.
